

Andrew "Lucky" Osborne was born in Jackson, Mississippi, January 22, 1944. He attended school in Tchula, Mississippi, after which he became a member of the United States Navy. Lucky is married to Debi. They have one daughter, Joyce "Cookie" Schemmel and two grandchildren, Zackery, and Samantha. Lucky is currently employed by Dongieux's Laundry Equipment in Jackson, Mississippi, and he frequently assists the Old Capitol Museum in Jackson with the creation of their exhibits. When Lucky isn't working, he enjoys participating in Civil War re-enactments where he portrays an officer in the Federal Artillery and a Petty Officer in the Federal Navy. Lucky is known for reproducing period woodcuts in pen, ink and pastels, and he also builds miniature buildings and scenes using a mixture of materials. Lucky's creation of the Old Capitol's "Town of Possum Ridge" is a major feature of the museum's Christmas display.
